TEMPLE EXECUTIVE SEARCH JOINS GLOBAL COMMUNICATIONS SEARCH PARTNERSHIP

GLOBAL REACH – LOCAL KNOWLEDGE

Temple Executive Search, Australia's leading specialist corporate affairs and reputation search firm, has joined the Global Communications Search Partnership (GCSP), extending opportunities for its clients and candidates to a global network of corporate affairs search specialists.

The GCSP is a collaboration of preeminent independent corporate affairs executive search firms: Taylor Birchwood in the UK and Middle East; Heyman Associates in the US; the newly merged GKPRCC in Germany; Barber Search in Hong Kong; and now Temple Executive Search in Australia.

The network is designed to bring together deep regional expertise with global perspective, while allowing each member firm to remain independent and focused on their local market.

Executive Director and Co-Founder of Temple Executive Search, Rebecca Tabakoff said it was timely to be joining the GCSP during historic levels of geopolitical, political and economic volatility.

"Local expertise is very important to our clients but they want their search partners and their candidates to be deeply connected to global developments. This network brings us together with the world's leaders in corporate affairs search on their respective markets and we will bring that global perspective to our clients and candidates," she said.

"We are so excited to be part of the GCSP. For years we have been talking to each other, because we all shared the same relentless focus on being the experts in corporate affairs in our markets. While we remain an independent business, we can now bring our collective expertise and shared experience together for our clients, candidates and our industry.

“We have all observed that Corporate Affairs leaders are at the forefront of helping organisations respond to shifts in geo-politics, business conditions, technology, especially AI, and stakeholder trust. Through the shared expertise of the GCSP, we can offer a clearer view of the evolving talent landscape, identify the growing challenges facing corporate affairs teams, and elevate and share our collective understanding of what world-class leadership in communications and corporate affairs looks like today.”

As part of the agreement, Rebecca Tabakoff and Temple Co-Founder and Executive Director, Ross Thornton, will join the Board of the GCSP.

Ross Thornton said: “On a practical level, Temple joining the GCSP allows the partners to work together as a referral network on global and regional roles.

“We are already collaborating on global searches, identifying local Australian talent for global opportunities and discovering new talent for local businesses.”

The GCSP will continue to develop and share its expertise through a series of research reports as well as education, training and networking opportunities designed to share insights from senior leaders and provide global benchmarks for the priorities, pressures, and levers of influence shaping the Corporate Affairs Function both in Australia and across the globe.

ABOUT TEMPLE EXECUTIVE SEARCH

Reputation Starts With People

Temple Executive Search are the Corporate Affairs experts in Australia. Founded in 2013 by Ross Thornton and Rebecca Tabakoff, Temple offers executive search, training and consulting in all aspects of corporate affairs including communications, public affairs, government relations and policy, investor relations and sustainability.

We are the only executive search team in Australia staffed by former corporate affairs practitioners. Rebecca and Ross have accomplished corporate affairs careers in their own right, and they transformed their passion for the industry into a highly successful executive search and consulting business.

With over 80 years combined corporate affairs experience in the Temple team, every search lead understands corporate affairs from having lived the roles they fill. Temple's expertise is sought by boards and executives of ASX listed companies, global firms and private entities, government departments, not-for-profits and industry associations. As trusted advisors to the Corporate Affairs community, Temple is recognised for unearthing hidden talent and understands that reputation starts with people.
